Well, not so secret anymore! These are my favourite spots in Paris that aren't overcrowded with tourists 24/7, and are generally more tranquil, serene and beautiful. Many were discovered simply by wandering the magical streets of this city of love, exploring hidden alleyways and venturing into small side streets.

10. The Parister

The Parister is nestled away on a quiet street, and it's undoubtedly the place to stay at for a unique experience! It exudes an energetic vibe, with bright floral arrangements providing a splash of colour and aromatic scents. Luxury at its finest, it's still relatively new but I'm sure it'll grow to be hugely popular...so check it out before the crowds come rushing!

I stayed there in November 2017 in the Deluxe Room on the 5th floor. When we first went in the room we were pretty wow-ed at the sight of timeless and typically Parisian elegance, which I think is the perfect way for a hotel room to be decorated.

Apart from the Queen size bed, I had a comfortable room to get ready around the brightly lit desk and even a private terrace with amazing view of the Parisian street. Also, there were designer wallpaper and the brass ornaments, which my friend and I were both a big fan of.

We had breakfast included in our room rates, and I would defo suggest doing the same if you're visiting the Hotel Parister. We were super impressed with the sheer variety of food on offer, with a very thorough continental selection.

Probably you know that I've recently become obsessed with sports, and used to spend 2-3 hours per day in a gym. This hotel is one of my favs just because it has a 65-foot-long (20-meter-long) swimming pool, gym, and hammam. Everything I need to begin and end the day!

During our stay in Paris, Hotel Parister made me feel like home. Elegant, warm and yet so cozy! I cannot wait to come back soon it was such a romantic dream.

When you're in Paris, be sure to reserve some time away from the main attractions to go and check out these 10 secret spots – I can guarantee you won't be disappointed.
